BIO: Sidney Moreland has served as Arbitrator in hundreds of civil and labor disputes throughout the United States. He serves on multiple arbitration rosters and panels including the American Arbitration Association, National Mediation Board, Federal Mediation Conciliation Service, and is named as the Arbitrator in numerous private contracts across America. He has arbitrated for parties involved in virtually every industrial and service sector, including the resolution of disputes within the federal government. Arbitrator Moreland was one of the first Arbitrators in America to arbitrate a multi-million dollar class action litigation. He presently presides over 5 public law boards resolving transportation sector claims. He has lectured on dispute resolution methodology, including presentations on electronic media/internet effects upon business and the workplace; and how to avoid business litigation.

OBJECTIVE: To serve as a neutral third party and hearing officer to remedy civil matters promptly in a forum alternative to conventional litigation, resulting in the construction of document(s) necessary to sufficiently reflect the binding and final resolution of that matter.
